

Imperial War Museums

The successful candidate will assist the Head of Trusts and Foundations in identifying, researching and preparing bids to grant making bodies to support this major capital campaign and on-going revenue projects.

The Imperial War Museum was established in 1917 to ensure that future generations understood the cause, course and consequences of the First World War. Almost 100 years on, IWM has extensive plans to continue our founding remit throughout the First World War Centenary and beyond. IWM's programme includes new First World War Galleries at IWM London (opening summer 2014), an innovative digital platform Lives of the First World War and a major temporary exhibition at IWM North. IWM is also leading the Centenary Partnership, a growing network of over 1,000 local, national and international cultural and educational organisations spanning 25 countries. The Centenary Partnership will present a four-year vibrant programme of cultural events and activities engaging millions of people across the world.
