

Art Handler

National Gallery

The National Gallery attracts over 4.5 million visitors a year and its collection of over 2300 western European paintings is one of the richest and most comprehensive in the world.

We are looking for two experienced art handlers to join our team at the National Gallery on a fixed term contract of one year. The period in question will cover some exceptional activity for the department which will include the installation of the Veronese Exhibition in some of the main floor galleries and significant movement of the permanent collection on the National Gallery's site. As part of the team, you would share responsibility for all aspects of the preparation and installation of any art works associated with these activities.

As an Art Handler, you will have worked as part of an established team in a museum or appropriate commercial environment. You would be able to demonstrate excellent technical and communication skills, with a willingness to contribute to solving issues associated with the work.
