

Design Manager (Department of Exhibitions & Design)

National Museums Scotland

This is an exciting and challenging time for the Exhibitions and Design Department as it contributes to the ongoing implementation of a new five year public engagement strategy focusing on fostering enjoyment, discovery, learning and participation.

You will be responsible for 3D and 2D design and print services across all National Museum sites, working with internal customers, visitor engaging learning programmes, displays and exhibitions, and marketing and communications.

Responsible for the creative design process and the management of the quality and standards of design deployed across National Museums Scotland, you will ensure successful project delivery in adherence to organisational project methodology, corporate identity guidelines and in accordance with financial procedures.

You will manage, motivate and develop the design team, supporting them to achieve good quality and creative work in a timely manner. You will drive departmental priorities for design and print production, ensuring that resources are deployed efficiently and effectively for National Museums Scotland projects.
