

Schools Officer

National Gallery

The National Gallery's collection of Western European paintings is one of the richest and most comprehensive in the world. Its Schools programme is one of the largest in Europe, welcoming 65,000 school children every year as well as providing a wealth of opportunities for teachers' professional development. Taking the collection as inspiration, the programme inspires critical and creative thinking and learning across the curriculum.

The Gallery has a vacancy for a Schools Officer who, together with the job-share partner, are responsible for the on-site visit programme.

The post is part time, two days a week for a fixed period of 6 months. The post holder will have teaching experience and have undertaken an administrative role preferably in a museum/gallery context. They must be a creative thinker and consummate organiser; have a good knowledge of western art; understand current educational issues; and be committed to facilitating transformative learning experiences for pupils of all ages.

To apply please click on 'more information' below. Please note we do not accept CV applications.

Location:	Central London
Category:	Education
Duration:
Type of Contract:	Contract
Hours:	Part Time
added: May 15, 2013	deadline: May 29, 2013

More information: <http://login.amris.com/wizards/nationalgallery/vacancyView.php?requirementId=OTMw&jld=>