

Image Sales Executive

Natural History Museum

The Museum's picture library looks after all types of commercial and non commercial images and the role of the sales executive is to deliver revenue targets and provide an efficient, prompt and reliable service to both internal and external customers.

You will build up a new customer base by proactively marketing the picture library to new and existing clients and be responsible for all sales and invoicing administration.

The successful candidate will have experience of transparency scanning and preparing images using Adobe Photoshop and knowledge of colour management principles.

A Degree (or equivalent) preferably in Science or Art History and previous experience of working in a commercial picture library is also essential for this post.
